

We try to stay away from celebrity scandal here at the Dooferbook, as worship of famous people is a completely mind-numbing pursuit that takes away from normal everyday activities like sleeping late and drinking beer. In case you aren't up to speed with the leading news story in the world, it seems Tiger Woods has been busy putting that big fat wallet to work, laying miles and miles of pipe along the lonely road of the PGA tour. As all his conquests of Christmases past began oozing from the woodwork, his wife got wind of his romps and did what no other player on the PGA tour has been able to do: beat the snot out of him with a golf club. While I'll leave it to the mainstream press to keep you up to date on the latest misdeeds of Tiger, I thought I'd share a clip from a Chinese news station covering the big story. Not content with simply reporting the news, these guys created a 3D re-enactment of the events of last weekend, complete with some pretty nifty CGI that makes the animation efforts of our global warming friends look even further amateurish. How long until we see this kind of reporting in our media? Has China ushered in a new era of newspeak?

[video:<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=jV85rD0gfqo> 400x300]